Description :

PDF-0033c | Danson House (1762–66) is one of the finest surviving villas by the architect Robert Taylor (1714–88). Restrained, compact and ingeniously planned, it was built for the City merchant John Boyd (1718–1800), who had made his fortune in the West Indies sugar trade. Boyd had a keen eye for the arts. He engaged William Chambers to design chimney pieces, picture frames and garden buildings, the ... Danson House: The anatomy of a Georgian Villa
